

Breathing poison in the world's most polluted city

Delhi is now the worst polluted city in the world. Out of the 178 countries there are in the world, Delhi is ranked 175th. What are they doing though to stop it?

They have now banned cars that are over a decade old and aren't aloud to be driven on the streets. This is because the engine will start to have problems and will let out dangerous fumes that will stay trapped in the atmosphere and keep circling the city.

Also nearby there is the Sahara, and it blows dust over Delhi.

They are making large walls around the city to stop it.

In Delhi the changes might be small but it will certainly help change the levels of pollution. Scientists think if you have lived there for 30 years you will have the lungs of a smoker but now its 35.

By Ellie Campbell